

SWEDISH INSTITUTE at ATHENS

SEMINAR ON THE HISTORY OF ARCHAEOLOGY

The Swedish Institute at Athens invites you to a seminar on the history of archaeology, on Friday December 15, 2017, at 14.00.

Swedish Institute in Athens, Mitseon 9

The presentations will be in English. All warmly welcome!

Abstract and program:

Why do we excavate and what happens when excavations do not go according to plan? By studying the history of archaeology we can better understand the outcomes of previous archaeological research projects as well as current challenges. Two papers will address these issues with Swedish excavation projects as their point of departure.

14.00 Ingrid Berg

Digging for digging's own sake - archaeological practice as national prestige.

14.30 Fredrik Tobin

Asine, Labraunda and San Giovenale - when excavations do not go according to plan
